Foreword

Welcome to the Workspace Design Show! We are thrilled to have you with us for two inspiring days at the RAI Amsterdam as we collectively explore what workspaces can look and feel like.

This year's theme, 'Activate the Senses', is brought to life across every corner of the show floor, through new ideas, bold designs, unexpected materials, and immersive experiences. As you journey through the event, I hope you will take a moment to notice what sparks curiosity, what energises you, and what simply makes you feel good. That's the power of great workplace design.

We have created an exceptional line-up of speakers across our three talks lounges, so do drop into the panel discussions. They are full of both practical insight and fresh perspectives. Our exhibitors are equally excited to meet you and explore how they might support your upcoming projects. From innovative furniture systems to acoustic solutions and lighting concepts, there's so much to discover.

And please — don't rush. Take the time to connect with fellow attendees. A spontaneous chat over coffee might just lead to your next collaboration.

I would like to extend a huge thank you to our team who have put the Show together, to the advisory board who play such an important role in shaping the event, to the speakers for sharing their wonderful insights, to the exhibitors for sharing some of the most transformative products in workplace interiors, to the partners for their support, and to each of you for coming to the show and being part of the experience. Everything that happens at the Show is hopefully playing a part in what unravels in the Benelux workplaces in the coming years.

I really hope that you find your time here valuable, and equally importantly that you enjoy it!

Occupiers Forum

Our design for the Occupiers Forum draws inspiration from 'speakers', both as voices and objects. Floating forms and colour gradients as echo sound waves, guiding focus to the stage. Transparent boundaries create an immersive world, amplifying the experience of engaging speakers and drawing the audience into their stories, highlighting connection, creativity, and collective inspiration.

Workplace Experience Talks Pavillion

Mecanoo's pavilion for the Workspace Design Show explores the evolving nature of the modern working environment—collaborative, human-centred, and increasingly diverse. Designed with intentionally ambiguous borders, the pavilion invites interaction and curiosity. It blurs the lines between inside and outside, formal and informal, encouraging spontaneous engagement from every angle.

BIS|Econocom, the specialist in HYBRID WORKPLACES

The way we work is changing at lightning speed. Employees want flexibility, while organizations strive for efficiency and experience. Across Europe, we help organizations future-proof their work environments with smart audiovisual solutions that make hybrid collaboration truly work.

At our booth A40 you discover how to transform meeting rooms, workspaces, and reception areas into inspiring, efficient, and safe places. Our experts will show you how technology and design go hand in hand. And of course, a freshly brewed coffee will be waiting for you!

Join our inspiring workshops (in Dutch) at our booth:

- 11:00 – 11:30 How Yealink makes hybrid collaboration effortless
- 13:00 – 13:30 Design meets technology: creating experiential interior design
- 15:00 – 15:30 Efficient workspace management with GoBright

Each session offers practical insights and live demos to inspire your work.

Visit BIS|Econocom at Booth A40 and get inspired by the hybrid workplace of tomorrow!

The UK's Leading Workspace Interiors Event

What to Expect at Workspace Design Show in London for 2026

From the moment you step through the doors of the Business Design Centre, you'll know you're not just attending another trade show. You're entering the most authoritative voice of the niche community around workplace design in the UK. Workspace Design Show (25–26 February 2026) isn't simply about sourcing products or ticking off CPD credits; it's where workspaces are actively shaped, questioned and reimagined by the people who build them. Architects. Designers. Occupiers. Developers. Fit-out firms. Tech thinkers. Material pioneers. Five thousand of them, all coming together under one roof with one shared goal, to create better places to work.

The new year's edition will embrace a bold new theme: Connected Realities — Where Physical Meets Digital, and Work Evolves by Design. It's a timely exploration of how technology, space and human behaviour are beginning to merge into a seamless experience. The show floor will become a live demonstration of this overarching theme, not just through talks and installations, but through the very stands themselves. Exhibitors have been invited to interpret the theme in their own way, whether through tactile-tech material blends, sensory storytelling, AR showreels embedded in joinery, live data displays, or unexpected moments where digital intelligence meets human warmth. The result? A show floor that behaves less like an exhibition and more like a living prototype of the workplaces we'll soon be inhabiting.

But beyond the spectacle, Workspace Design Show remains what it has always been, a place where ideas turn into action. Over 150 speakers will take to the stage across the Workspace Design Talks, Sustainability Talks, Occupiers Forum and FIS Conference, offering insights not just from designers but from the people who use and fund workspaces. Real clients. Real data. Real change. It's strategy you can take back to your studio or boardroom the next morning.

And for the first time ever, that impact will be formally recognised. The launch of the Workspace Design Awards at the 2026 edition marks a new chapter, one where projects are judged not simply on aesthetics, but on lived experience and business value, with a jury made up entirely of occupiers, developers and project managers. No ego. No ego-polishing. Just excellence.

Whether you're exhibiting, visiting, or simply curious about where workplace culture is heading, the 2026 edition of Workspace Design Show in London will offer more than a show. It's a shared experiment in what happens when physical space and digital intelligence stop competing, and start collaborating. You don't walk through it. You navigate it. You don't just look at products. You feel their intention.

And you certainly will leave inspired.

Workplace Futures

Strategy, Space & Workplace Experience

A Preview of the Workplace Futures Survey — Conducted by Workspace Design Show (5–6 November 2025, RAI Amsterdam) in collaboration with Workwire.

The way we work is transforming but how are today's workplaces really adapting? To answer this, we launched Workplace Futures: Strategy, Space & Workplace Experience, a focused industry survey capturing insights from architects, designers, consultants, facility managers and workplace experts across the Netherlands and neighbouring European markets.

Our goal was clear: To uncover how hybrid models are evolving in 2025, how organisations are reshaping office space, which technologies are being prioritised, and what strategies are proving most (and least) effective in creating people-centric, agile workplaces.

The survey results highlight a workplace sector in transition. Most respondents are based in the Netherlands, with additional input from neighboring European countries, and represent a mix of strategic and operational roles such as workplace designers, consultants, architects, and facility managers. They work across both profit-driven and non-profit organizations, with a slight majority leaning towards the profit sector.

Hybrid working has become the standard way of working and is largely perceived as positive, though the improvements in employee performance are small rather than big. Over half of the respondents are satisfied with their current hybrid model, but very few describe it as “highly successful.” The biggest challenges lie not in technology or productivity but in employee engagement, company culture, and balancing attendance patterns across the week.

In contrast, respondents indicate that their number one technology investments are in collaboration platforms, booking systems, and occupancy sensors, rather than in employee experience apps focused on wellbeing or personalization. These investments are generally considered somewhat effective. Meanwhile, the priorities in workplace design for 2025 are centered on employee wellbeing, team connection & collaboration, and technology enablement. Current performance in these areas lags behind their importance, creating a improvement gap.

Reshaping the office space

To facilitate the hybrid working model, most respondents report increasing collaboration zones and adding focus zones, while a smaller group indicate reducing individual desks and introducing modular or flexible workspaces. On average, respondents report that a larger share of office space is still allocated to individual desks. Collaboration zones take up a smaller but still substantial part of the layout. As organizations support the hybrid working model, they struggle with office attendance, as 0–40% of office space remains unused on peak days, rising to 40–80% on low days.

Impactful innovations

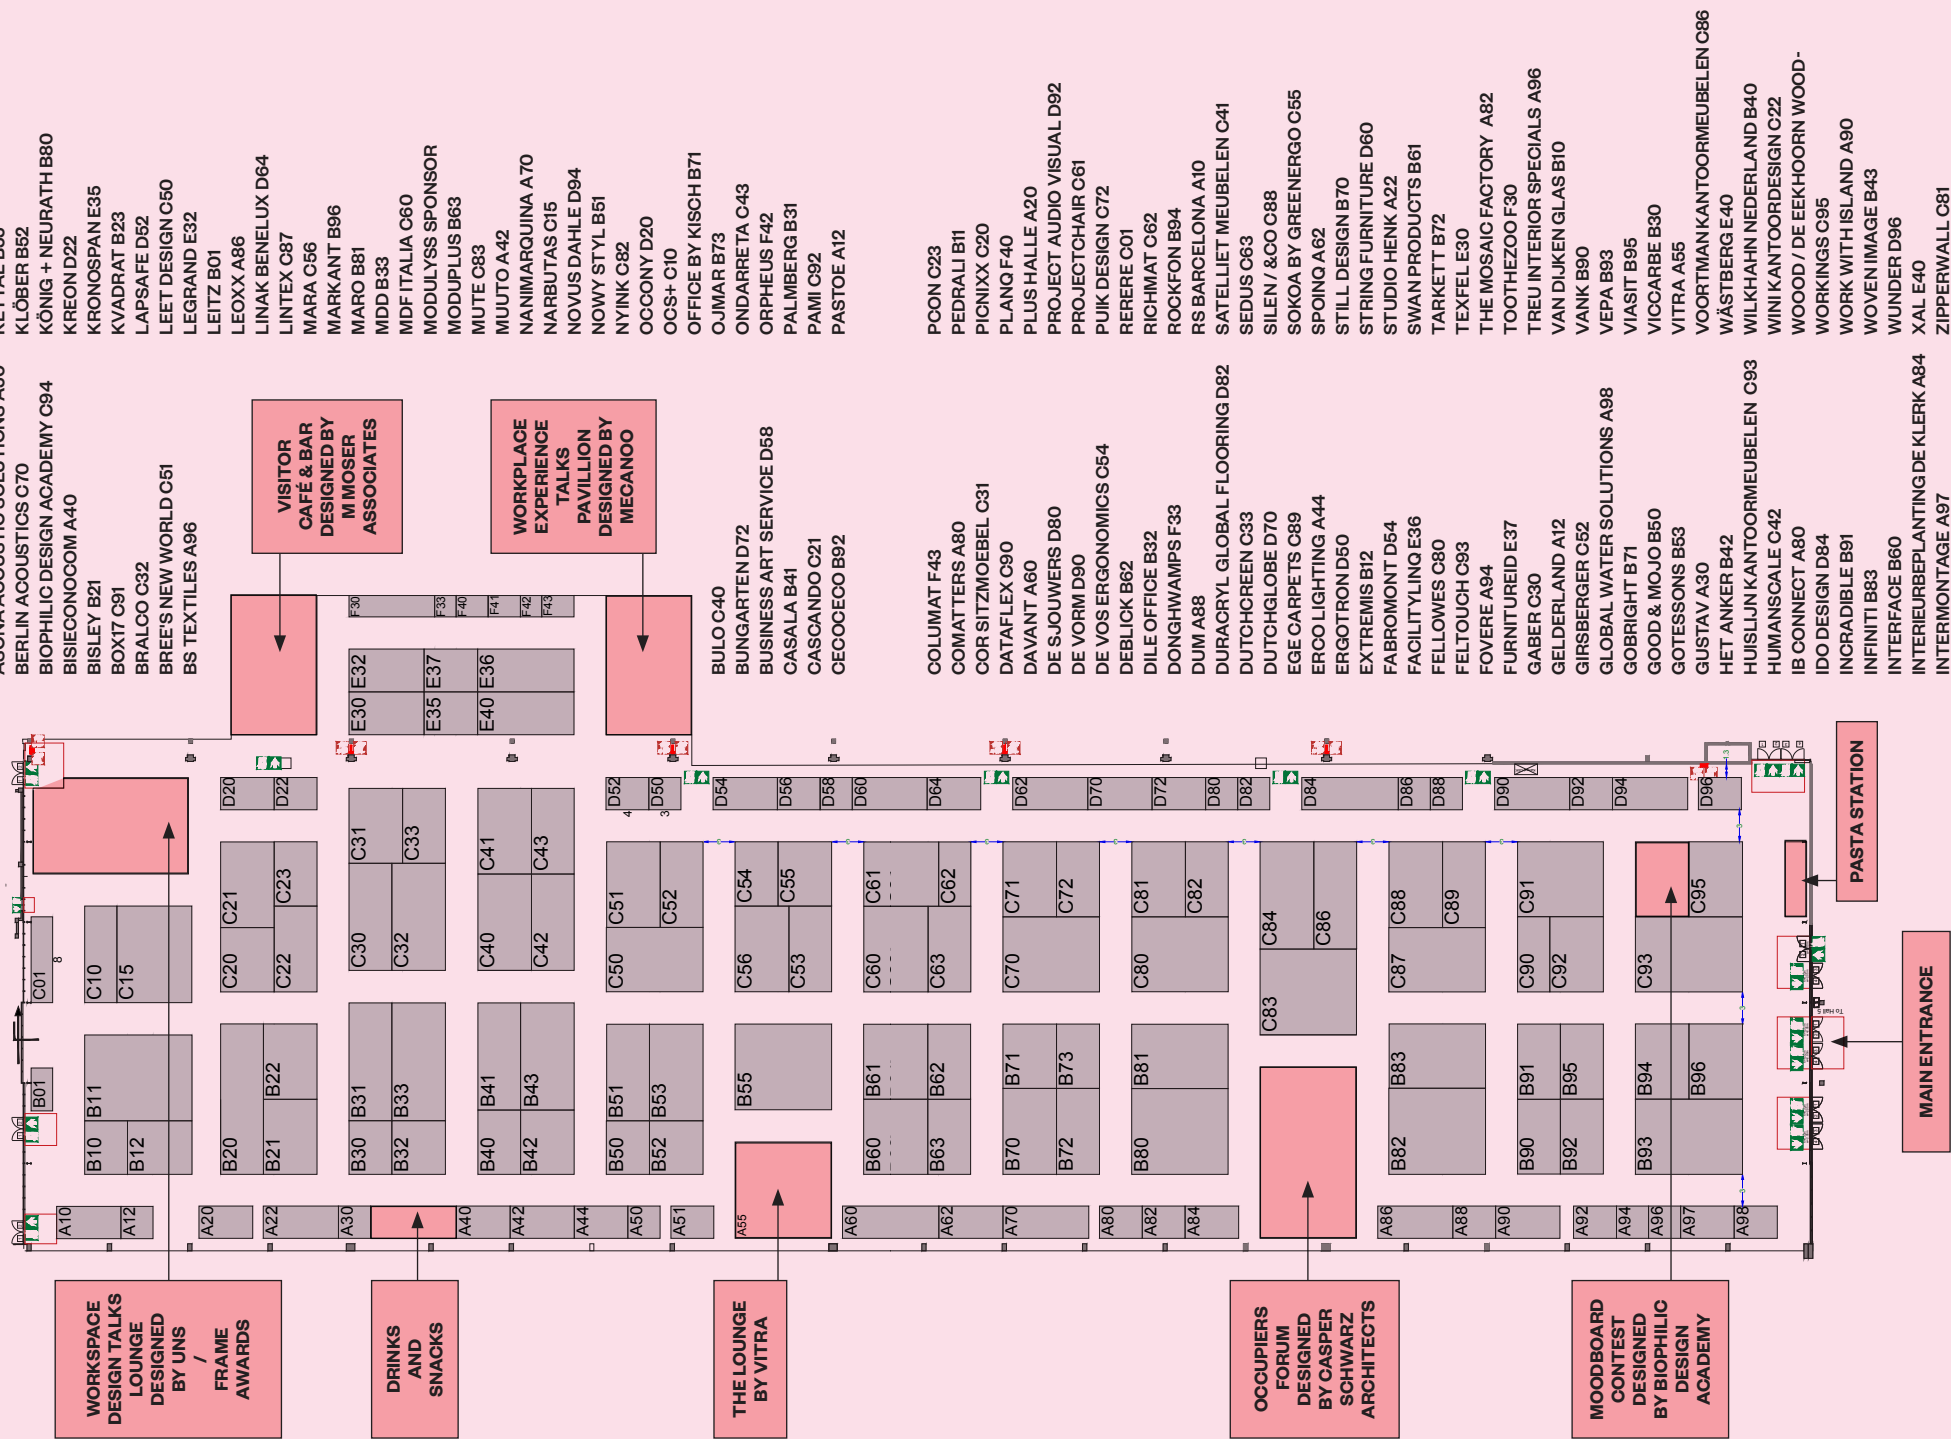

Impactful innovations most often include flexible office layouts, hybrid meeting solutions, and booking tools. Looking ahead, the most important needs for hybrid working and workplace design are better support for hybrid collaboration and a greater variety of workspace types in the design.

This is only a snapshot. The full Workplace Futures report including sector breakdowns, expert commentary and cross-country comparisons will be released digitally and exclusively to all Workspace Design Show attendees.
